

Communication Features

- The British are always distinguished by a restrained manner of communicating with other people. It may seem that they are too prim and unemotional. In fact, this manner of behavior is dictated by the English etiquette of communication. Speaking loudly and accompanying your speech with gestures is considered a sign of poor parenting. The British are not accepted to express their opinion, interrupting the interlocutor. A polite smile never leaves their face, no matter how they relate to you.